Online & Mobile Resources for Congressional Offices

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has developed a series of online and mobile resources Congressional offices can use to learn about the Agency's mission and programs, and to inform their constituents about how to be prepared for all types of disasters. These resources include online resources such as disaster-specific webpages, disaster registration information, and social media resources, such as FEMA's blog and Facebook pages, as well as a variety of Twitter accounts that provide updates on emergency management issues from around the country.

As always, Congressional offices can reach out to FEMA's Office of External Affairs, Congressional and Intergovernmental Affairs Division if they have questions or need additional information about the Agency's mission or programs:
